

Based on the organizational profile you shared, Stellar Associates should position itself online as a boutique international development consultancy and research firm, rather than a traditional consulting company. The website should communicate three messages immediately:

1. Technical Excellence – research, assessments, MEL, and strategic advisory services.
2. Credibility & Experience – senior experts with donor, UN, and international development backgrounds.
3. Local Presence with International Standards – strong Bangladesh-based implementation capacity combined with global analytical expertise.

For a newly established firm, I would recommend a clean, professional, donor-oriented website with 8–10 pages, rather than a large corporate site.

My recommendation

For a new consultancy like Stellar Associates, the website should look closer to international firms such as:

- Development Alternatives Inc. (DAI)
- Tetra Tech International Development
- Social Impact
- Integrity Global
- Ecorys
- NIRAS

The emphasis should be on expertise, evidence, and credibility, not on flashy graphics. A clean, text-rich website with strong expert profiles, service descriptions, and publications will be far more effective in attracting GIZ, EPD, UN agencies, USAID implementers, and international NGOs than a highly decorative corporate-style website.
